

About the author

Sheila McDade chose to write from a young man's perspective because she knows so much about them after raising two sons and spoiling two grandsons. This is her first work of fiction and second book. Her first book, A GOLDMINE FOR TEACHERS, can be downloaded from the website she and her husband maintain, www.ethical-media.org. You will see from their website why there is so much in YOUR TRUTH OR MINE about ethics, truth, and the Bible. Sheila has taught Sunday school for over forty years and her husband, Gary McDade, is a Gospel preacher.

Summary

Have you ever tried to figure out just what it was that nudged you to be who you are, like the things you like, do the things you do? As he contemplates this age old question Remy flashes back to the 1960's and remembers the crazy things he did when he was a kid. He and his daredevil friend Brice impact the city of Memphis, Tennessee with a haunted house tale, sneak into the city zoo at night, climb to the top of the Sky Ride in an amusement park, get lost in the woods in the snow, and dive off a fifty foot cliff just to name a few.

An attempt to run away from home, the death of a friend, a homework assignment, and his mistreatment of a neighbor have nothing in common except how they nudged Remy to be who he turned out to be.

"The same sun which melts wax hardens clay." All the nudges, that impacted Remy's life melted his heart and made him a man with ethical and moral principles and a deep faith in God.
